Chapter 2: The Evolution of Art

Art, like beauty, has undergone significant transformations over centuries. From the cave paintings of our ancestors to the avant-garde movements of the 20th century, art has continuously challenged conventions and pushed boundaries. However, with the rise of technology, the democratization of creativity, and the emergence of new forms of expression, traditional notions of art are being disrupted.

Chapter 3: The Crisis of Beauty

Amidst this artistic revolution, some argue that beauty is being abandoned in favor of shock value and provocative ideas. Critics suggest that contemporary art has become excessively conceptual and detached from our innate appreciation for aesthetics. The pursuit of novelty and controversy has led to the devaluation of beauty, leaving us searching for its elusive presence within the realm of art.

Chapter 4: Rediscovering Beauty

While the future of art may seem uncertain, beauty continues to prevail, albeit in new and unexpected ways. Artists are reinventing traditional mediums, intertwining technology and craftsmanship to create captivating sensory experiences. Immersive installations, multimedia exhibitions, and interactive performances are breathing new life into the artistic landscape, inviting audiences to explore hidden realms of beauty and emotion.

: Resilience and Renewal

As the boundaries of art expand, the quest for beauty endures. Whether through traditional mediums, experimental expressions, or mind-bending installations, the power and allure of beauty continue to captivate our hearts and minds. The end of art may only mark the beginning of a new chapter, where beauty thrives in unexpected forms, captivating and inspiring generations to come.

Beauty and the End of Art shows how a resurgence of interest in beauty and a sense of ending in Western art are challenging us to rethink art, beauty and their relationship. By arguing that Wittgenstein's later work and contemporary theory of perception offer just what we need for a unified approach to art and beauty, Sonia Sedivy provides new answers to these contemporary challenges. These new accounts also provide support for the Wittgensteinian realism and theory of perception that make them possible.

Wittgenstein's subtle form of realism explains artworks in terms of norm governed practices that have their own varied constitutive norms and values.

Wittgensteinian realism also suggests that diverse beauties become available and compelling in different cultural eras and bring a shared 'higher-order' value into view. With this framework in place, Sedivy argues that perception is a form of engagement with the world that draws on our conceptual capacities. This approach explains how perceptual experience and the perceptible presence of the world are of value, helping to account for the diversity of beauties that are available in different historical contexts and why the many faces of beauty allow us to experience the value of the world's perceptible presence.

Carefully examining contemporary debates about art, aesthetics and perception, Beauty and the End of Art presents an original approach. Insights from such diverse thinkers as Immanuel Kant, Hans-Georg Gadamer and Arthur Danto, Alexander Nehamas, Elaine Scarry and Dave Hickey are woven together to reveal how they make good sense if we bring contemporary theory of perception and Wittgensteinian realism into the conversation.
