Born in 1925 in Panjeri, situated on the foothills of Jammu and Kashmir; Abdul Rehman Khan entered the British Indian Army in 1941 aged sixteen years. This book is written in first person by Aamnah Rahman who shares Abdul's experiences of growing up in pre-partition Jammu and Kashmir, serving as a soldier under British command and witnessing the partition of the Indian Sub-Continent before migrating to the United Kingdom and experiencing life as a first generation migrant. The book starts with a reflection of Abdul Rehman Khan in later life before highlighting his early years, military life and witnessing partition of the Indian Sub-Continent and ending with his last years in England. This is a reflection of how life has changed for people of Kashmiri Pakistani background in the UK as well those who remained behind, it also highlights the perceptions people within these communities have of each other. A book that can be read by young and old alike, there is much to be taken from it in terms of history, changes in society and reminiscence.
