One area where Lancelin's approach is particularly noticeable is in the media landscape. This approach, however, has not come without its fair share of obstacles. Lancelin has faced backlash and resistance from those whose interests are threatened by her fearless pursuit of truth. Despite this, she remains undeterred and continues to be a prominent figure in shaping the media landscape of the 21st century.

Aude Lancelin's Mission

At the heart of Aude Lancelin's mission is a deep belief in the power of intellectual confrontation to drive societal progress. She firmly believes that by engaging in uncomfortable conversations, we can shed light on complex issues and challenge established paradigms.

Everything in their respective positions divides them: Alain Badiou is the thinker of a revitalized communism and Alain Finkelkraut the mournful observer of the loss of values. The two opponents, gathered here for their first-ever debate, have irreconcilable visions. Yet neither is a stranger to controversy, and in this debate they make explicit the grounds of their personal dispute as well as addressing, in a frank and open exchange, their ideas and theories.

Guided by Aude Lancelin, the two philosophers discuss subjects as diverse as national identity, Israel and Judaism, May 1968, and renewed popularity of the idea of communism. Their passionate debate is more than just the sum total of their disagreements, however, for neither of them is satisfied with the state of our society or the direction in which its political representatives persist in taking it. They agree that there needs to be change and their confrontation in this volume shows the importance of asking difficult questions, not only of each other, but also of our political systems.
