10 Tips to become a successful interviewer!

Tips for Residents interviewing their future colleagues!

- Be Honest
Every program has its pros and cons- even yours. Be honest about your flaws.
- Be Prepared
Review the student's materials. Try digging deeper by asking, "What's missing from the application?"
- Dress to Impress
If you happen to be coming or going from a shift, scrubs may be acceptable, but if not, your attire should be professional.
- Have a Signature Question
Have 1-2 standard questions for each applicant so that you can compare and contrast answers.
- Practice
Try practicing your interviewing skills on 4th year medical students rotating in your department.
- Don't Spew Negativity
You might be in the middle of a tough stretch, but try to stay positive.
- Don't ask "Do you have any questions?"
Try to avoid asking if the applicant has any questions until the end of the interview.
- Don't Ask Illegal Questions
Avoid questions about marital status, kids, health, age, religion, country of origin, or arrest record.
- Don't Fill the Silence
Try to avoid the trap of filling moments of silence and talking too much.
- Don't Hold Onto Biases
Start the interview with a clean slate. Avoid hanging onto biases you may have developed based on a student's application.
