After completing his formal education in photography, Tebbs embarked on a remarkable career that would intertwine his love for both art and architecture. His photographs became more than just images on paper; they were expressions of his deep admiration for the beauty found in structures erected by man.

A Glimpse into Tebbs' Captivating Collection

Tebbs' portfolio boasts an extensive collection of architectural photographs, highlighting the stunning design and intricate details of various buildings. From ancient Roman ruins to modern skyscrapers, his imagery captures the essence of each architectural wonder.

One of his most iconic photographs is "Arc de Triomphe," which showcases the grandeur of this legendary Parisian landmark. The photograph elevates the architectural masterpiece to a whole new level, representing Tebbs' ability to convey a sense of importance and majesty in his shots.

Another gem in his collection is the photograph titled "Fallingwater." Tebbs brilliantly captures Frank Lloyd Wright's masterpiece, showcasing the harmonious integration of the architectural structure with the natural beauty surrounding it. The photograph brings the audience closer to the emotional experience intended by the architect.

Architects and Tebbs: A Symbiotic Relationship

Throughout his career, Robert Tebbs formed profound connections with architects who recognized his talent for capturing the artistic essence of their creations. Collaborating with renowned figures such as Frank Lloyd Wright, Le Corbusier, and Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, Tebbs' photographs played a vital role in immortalizing their architectural achievements.

Architects often turned to Tebbs to chronicle their work, as he possessed the unique ability to capture not only the aesthetics but also the underlying emotions and narratives within their designs. He was able to translate abstract concepts into tangible visual experiences that resonated deeply with both architects and the general public.

Tebbs' unprecedented approach to architectural photography undeniably played a significant role in promoting the work of these visionary architects, turning their masterpieces into global icons.

The Legacy Lives On

One of the finest architectural photographers in America, Robert W. Tebbs produced the first photographic survey of Louisiana's plantations in 1926. From those images, now housed in the Louisiana State Museum, and not widely available until now, 119 plates showcasing fifty-two homes are featured here.

Richard Anthony Lewis explores Tebbs's life and career, situating his work along the line of plantation imagery from nineteenth-century woodcuts and paintings to later twentieth-century photographs by John Clarence Laughlin, among others. Providing the family lineage and construction history of each home, Lewis discusses photographic techniques Tebbs used in his alternating panoramic and detail views.

A precise documentarian, Tebbs also reveals a poetic sensibility in the plantation photos. His frequent emphasis on aspects of decay, neglect, incompleteness, and loss lends a wistful aura to many of the images—an effect compounded by the fact that many of the homes no longer exist. This noticeable vacillation between objectivity and sentiment, Lewis shows, suggests unfamiliarity and even discomfort with the legacy of slavery.

Poised on the brink of social and political reforms, Louisiana in the mid-1920s had made significant strides away from the slave-based agricultural economy that the plantation house often symbolized. Tebbs's Louisiana plantation photographs capture a literal and cultural past, reflecting a burgeoning national awareness of historic preservation and presenting plantations to us anew.

Select plantations included: Ashland/Belle Helene, Avery Island, Belle Chasse, Belmont, Butler-Greenwood, L'Hermitage, Oak Alley, Parlange, René Beauregard House, Rosedown, Seven Oaks, Shadows-on-the-Teche, The Shades, and Waverly.
