Dan Wetta was born in 1927 and inherited an interest in art from his father who was a commercial artist. Dan began drawing and cartooning as a child, but he earned a living as an auditor, so when he retired, he thought he could use his auditing experience to ferret out errors in the bible, but boy, did he get fooled! He wound up doing a series of volumes entitled El Artista: A Lifetime of Curiosity, which is a collection of paintings and cartoons with humorous short stories. In volume 1, A Smart Alec Audits the Bible, Dan Wetta has to eat crow. This second volume also includes interesting cartoons, abstracts, and paintings regarding Bible stories, but also begins to bring in other types of work that the artist produced in his prodigious career.
