REMEMBERING THE EMIL HOBO TOURS

In the waning days of our past lives, we can still express a small sense of notable impertinence, by sticking our three finger salute in the eyes of our new Corporate Congresses and to the new cadre of clerical over lords that toil endlessly to strip us of what little personal identification that we hopelessly try to muster.

We do this by not only remembering Emil's Hobo Tours but by embracing them as a secret mantra to where our hearts still run free and we can obtain our dreams if we are willing to do the work, take the time and these days pay the price of being labeled "Social Deviants" – which bring with it a heavier price of social segregation, reeducation and/or the reduction of our Social Credit Scores.

In Emil's Hobo World, we are yet FREE and make our own social contract with

Civilization

on our terms.

Even in terms of pre-historic times, the Shwedagon Pagoda is ancient and many tell me that it might well be much older, back to the Zeateppe Ages when the Gods lived amongst men.

For literary eons of ages...for thousands of years they said that this was God's Home until he decided to move on and the neighborhood got overrun by Foreign Devils and everything started to go to Hell!

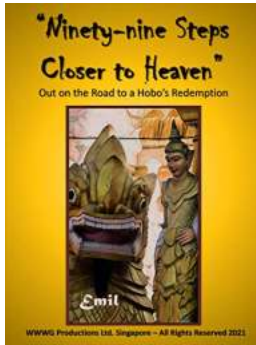

I have spent endless days milling about with the fortune tellers, huskers and fake tour guides that circulated in the outer layers of the Temple Complex and it has been educational in learning their tricks and trades.

Long time readers will understand that I don't resent them in the least as they are just here to make a living and in a world where we have hundreds of millions of idle people hunkered down on every street corner trying their best to hustle a nickel, a dime to feed their family; I have no beef with the fact that they might be fleecing the more well-off in the process.

Instead, in a peculiar sort of way, I submit that it is fitting and I deeply respect the degree of professionalism and the utter creativity that they bring to this venture.

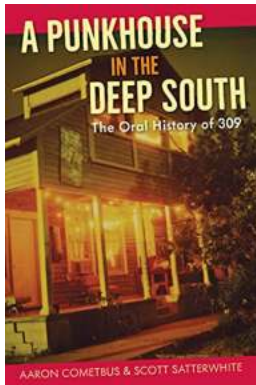

They are not begging, they are not cheating or stealing as they supply a rather quality of entertainment to the con unlike their richer cousins who do steal, beg and take everything from everyone else to make their wealth.

Like our cousin Jimmy B. always sang "Lawyers, thieves and bankers, I wouldn't want to be one..."
