One of the most haunted locations in Charleston is the Old Exchange and Provost Dungeon. Built in 1771, this historical building served as a custom house, a prisoner-of-war execution site, and even a place where pirates were held captive. With such a dark past, it's no wonder that the spirits of the past still linger within its walls. Visitors have reported hearing disembodied voices, feeling sudden drops in temperature, and catching glimpses of shadowy figures traversing the dimly lit corridors.

Another spine-chilling destination in Charleston is the Unitarian Church Graveyard. This cemetery, dating back to the early 19th century, is said to be haunted by the ghost of Annabel Lee, Edgar Allan Poe's muse. Throughout the years, visitors have claimed to witness a melancholic apparition dressed in white, believed to be the spirit of Annabel Lee herself, wandering among the tombstones.

Ghostly Encounters in the Haunted New Orleans

No discussion of the haunted South would be complete without mentioning the supernatural occurrences that have plagued the streets of New Orleans, Louisiana. Known for its vibrant music scene, exquisite cuisine, and mystical practices, New Orleans is also famous for its rich supernatural folklore.

The LaLaurie Mansion, located in the French Quarter, is infamous for the horrors that took place behind its doors. Owned by Madame Delphine LaLaurie in the 1830s, this mansion was the site of unimaginable cruelty towards LaLaurie's slaves. Today, the spirits of those tormented souls are believed to haunt the premises. Visitors often report hearing cries and moans emanating from the mansion, as well as witnessing apparitions of slaves in distress.

In addition to the LaLaurie Mansion, the St. Louis Cemetery No. 1 is another must-visit location in New Orleans. Built in the late 18th century, this cemetery is the final resting place of voodoo queen Marie Laveau. Known for her mystical powers and influence, Laveau is said to still grant wishes from beyond the grave. People from all over the world come to her tomb, covering it in markings and tokens in hopes of receiving her blessings.

Spooky Sights in Savannah, The Haunted Gem

Savannah, Georgia, with its historic architecture and enchanting moss-draped oak trees, creates the perfect atmosphere for ghostly encounters. The city is a hotspot for paranormal activity, making it one of the most haunted destinations in the South.

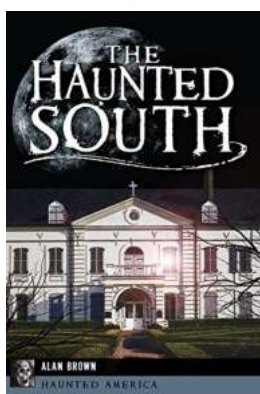

The Marshall House, now a charming hotel, has a dark past that continues to intrigue visitors. During the Civil War, this building was used as a hospital, and it is said to be haunted by the spirits of soldiers who met their untimely demise within its walls. Guests have reported hearing footsteps, feeling sudden rushes of cold air, and even encountering apparitions of nurses tending to the wounded.

Another spine-chilling location in Savannah is the Mercer-Williams House, made famous by the novel and movie "Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil." The house has a haunting atmosphere, with visitors often feeling a sense of unease while exploring its rooms. The most notorious ghostly presence within the Mercer-Williams House is that of Jim Williams, the previous owner, who is believed to still roam its halls.

: A Haunting Adventure awaits in the South

The haunted South of America is a realm of mystery and intrigue, where stories of restless spirits, tragic history, and dark legends intertwine. Whether you are a firm believer in the supernatural or a skeptic, exploring these haunted locations can be both a thrilling and bone-chilling experience.

So, if you're up for an adventure filled with ghostly encounters and a glimpse into the supernatural, pack your courage and head south. You never know what eerie secrets await you in the haunted South of America.

Southerners love the South. And some souls never leave. Savannah, New Orleans and St. Augustine are among the most haunted places in America, and chilling stories abound nearly everywhere below the Mason-Dixon line. At Seaman's Bethel Theater in Mobile, Alabama, actors and staff are frightened by the unnerving sounds of a child's laughter. The ghost of Alfred Victor DuPont, a noted ladies' man, is said to harass female employees in the stairwell at DuPont Mansion in Louisville, Kentucky. The Café Vermilionville is housed in what is reputed to be Lafayette's first inn. A young girl in a yellow dress, thought to be a previous owner's daughter who died from polio around the time of the Civil War, startles patrons from the balcony of the restaurant. Join author Alan Brown as he traverses the supernatural legends of the American South.
