How do you get through the moment when heartbreak + disappointment are so potent, you can't see clearly?

How do you move forward when all your choices force you to confront that you've been the common denominator all along?

How do you take radical responsibility without self-blaming?

How do you overcome the pain of failure, while still honoring + validating your feelings?

I began asking myself these questions when I was four months pregnant with my daughter, and coming to terms with the possibility of single motherhood.

It wasn't until two years after her birth, that I'd make peace with knowing I would continue asking these questions for the rest of my life. They serve as a North Star that always guides me when I've lost my way.

They challenge me to repeatedly balance gut instinct with divine intervention.

Pain with pride.

Fear with freedom.

External noise with internal poise.

This selection of diary entries illuminates my ongoing journey to live (and love) these questions.

I extend an invitation to you, dear reader, to bear witness as I unravel the layers of my psyche — letting my truth overflow, how ever messy or inconvenient it may be.

My prayer is that, in reading my story, you will find the courage to also dance through the labyrinth of your own mind.
