Another eerie spot is the Ellicott City Colored School, built in 1880 to provide education for African American children during the segregation era. It is said that the spirits of former students and teachers still roam the premises, with sightings of ghostly apparitions and strange sounds being reported by those brave enough to step inside.

The Patapsco Female Institute, a former girl's school turned haunted ruins, is another must-visit spot for paranormal enthusiasts. Visitors claim to have witnessed the ghostly apparitions of former students, heard phantom laughter, and even experienced unexplainable cold spots within the premises.

It's impossible to talk about Haunted Ellicott City without mentioning the infamous Hell House. As the name suggests, this location is notorious for its sinister history, satanic rituals, and paranormal activity. The dark energy that permeates this house has sent shivers down the spines of those who dare to come near, leaving them with chilling tales to share.

The Ghosts of Ellicott City

Among the many spirits that are said to haunt Ellicott City, the most prominent is that of Lottie Griffith. Lottie, a former inhabitant of Ellicott City, met a tragic end during a flood in 1868. Her spirit is believed to roam the streets, especially near the intersection of Main Street and Maryland Avenue. Many have reported encountering a woman in a white dress who silently walks by only to vanish into thin air.

Another well-known ghost is Josiah Snell, a reputable businessman from the 19th century. Josiah met his untimely demise when he was murdered, and his spirit is said to haunt his old place of business. Witnesses have reported encountering a transparent figure wearing Victorian-era clothing, seemingly unaware of the passage of time.

In this comprehensive compilation of ghost stories and local legends, Shelley Wygant explores the history and horrors of a village that somehow lives on.

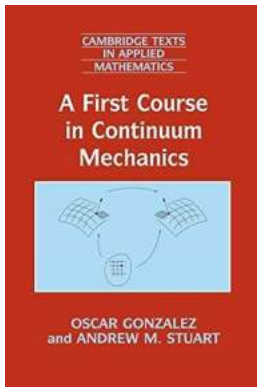

Beginning with its founding in 1772, Ellicott City endured an endless procession of tragic deaths. As a result, this eighteenth-century mill town is packed with restless spirits and unexplained supernatural occurrences. A mysterious artist haunts Castle Angelo and threatens to throw residents into the river below. Many of the temporary occupants of the former Easton and Sons Funeral Home seem to have remained, and the ghost of Annie Van Derlot still inhabits the ruins of the Patapsco Female Institute.
