As images often speak louder than words, let us embark on a virtual journey through a mesmerizing photo diary that captures the essence of Oslo's Covid-19 lockdown.

1. A Sea of Quietness

The hustle and bustle of Aker Brygge, Oslo's lively waterfront, vanished overnight as the city went into lockdown. The usually crowded promenade now stands deserted, creating a rare opportunity to capture the tranquility that engulfed the area. The stillness of the deserted chairs and tables outside restaurants paints a melancholic picture, reminiscent of long-lost memories that await rekindling.

2. Nature Reclaims Urban Spaces

One of Oslo's distinctive features is its harmonious integration of nature into the urban landscape. During the lockdown, nature reasserted its dominance more strongly than ever. Parks and gardens bloomed with wild abandon, reclaiming the concrete spaces it had once surrendered. A stroll through Slottsparken, the majestic park surrounding the Royal Palace, now reveals an enchanting display of colors and sounds, as birds reclaim their reign over the city.

3. Sunsets Over Sleeping Streets

One of the most surreal experiences of the Covid-19 lockdown in Oslo was witnessing the breathtaking beauty of sunsets over the city's abandoned streets. Against the backdrop of quietness, the vibrant hues of oranges, pinks, and purples painted the horizon with a sense of hope and serenity. The city's emptiness allowed the sun's final rays to dance and reflect in ways seldom seen, creating a captivating spectacle that mesmerized all who witnessed it.

4. Architectural Marvels Stand Tall

Oslo's skyline is adorned with architectural marvels that blend seamlessly with the natural beauty that surrounds them. During the Covid-19 lockdown, these structures stood tall as a symbol of resilience and strength. The Opera House, usually a hub of cultural activities, now stood silent, bathed in an enigmatic glow against the still waters of the fjord. The juxtaposition of architectural brilliance against the backdrop of a dormant city resonated deeply with the spirits of those longing for days of normalcy.

5. The Flickering City Lights

As night falls and darkness engulfs the city, one cannot help but appreciate the beauty of Oslo's flickering lights during the Covid-19 lockdown. The streets may be empty, but the twinkling lights that pierce through the vast darkness create an ethereal ambiance, almost reminiscent of a scene from a fairytale. The night lights evoke a sense of unity, reminding us that even in the face of adversity, Oslo remains a beacon of hope and life.

Unlocking the Beauty Within

As we reflect on these captivating images of Oslo's Covid-19 lockdown, we are reminded that amidst the confinement and uncertainty, beauty can be found even in the most unexpected places. Oslo's transformation during the pandemic serves as a reminder that resilience, serenity, and breathtaking beauty can emerge in the wake of adversity.

Though the lockdown in Oslo, like in many other cities, challenged its inhabitants, the photographs captured during this extraordinary period depict a compelling narrative of human resilience, wildlife reclamation, and the profound impact that stillness can have on our perception of the world.

As we eagerly await the end of the Covid-19 pandemic and a return to normalcy, let us cherish the captivating photo diary that unfolded during Oslo's lockdown. It serves as a reminder of the beauty that lies within and the unlimited possibilities that await us once the world unlocks again.

On 23.01.2021 there was an outbreak of the mutated corona virus from England in northern Follo, just outside Oslo. The next day, all nearby municipalities were closed. Only grocery stores, pharmacies, dentists, doctors and liquor stores were allowed to stay open.

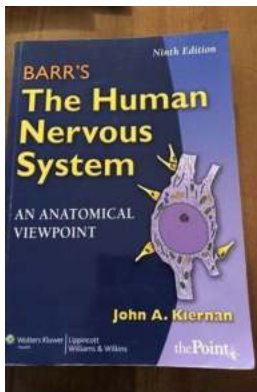

The day after Oslo was closed, I traveled around the center of Oslo to document that Oslo had gone from a city with a lot of social life to a ghost town.

In this book you can see images from Oslo in Norway the day after lockdown.
