- Checks: A check is when you attack your opponent's king, forcing them to move it out of harm's way. By checking your opponent, you gain time to coordinate your own pieces effectively and seize control over the board.
- Captures: Capturing an opponent's piece not only removes a potential threat but also forces them to recapture. It can disrupt their plans and open up possibilities for powerful counterattacks.
- Threats: A threat involves posing an immediate danger to your opponent's pieces or position. This puts pressure on them to respond, preventing them from executing their own strategies.
