Discovering the Origins

The Korean alphabet, Hangeul, was created in the 15th century during the Joseon Dynasty. It was designed by King Sejong the Great, who aimed to develop a writing system that would be accessible to all, regardless of their social status or literacy level. Before Hangeul's , the Korean language relied heavily on classical Chinese characters, which were complex and difficult to learn. Hangeul's unique design aimed to simplify the script and make it more widely accessible.

The Structural Brilliance of Hangeul

Hangeul is composed of 14 basic consonants and 10 basic vowels, which can be combined to form syllables. The letters in Hangeul are arranged in a block format, where individual letters are combined horizontally and vertically. This structure allows for easy recognition and accessibility, making it one of the most logical and efficient writing systems in the world.

An Alphabet for All

One of the most significant aspects of Hangeul is its accessibility. King Sejong envisioned a writing system that would empower the common people, allowing them to communicate effectively. Unlike many other scripts that have complex rules and extensive characters, Hangeul can be learned within a short period. Its user-friendly nature has contributed to the high literacy rate in Korea and serves as a testament to its design brilliance.
