Right after Mark Edwards starts the seventh grade at Tecumseh Junior High School he is persuaded to enter a pie eating contest. Vicky Thornton convinces Mark he can win. Mark knows he can win and if he does he might have a chance for a young romance with Vicky.

Fate intervenes on the morning of the pie eating contest. It was something that Mark wasn't prepared for. He is forced to face Vicky Thornton and tell her the truth. The fate of a young romance and junior high school friendship are what's at stake. Mark does not want to lose Vicky as a friend, but that decision is not up to him.

Some things that happen when you're twelve years old stay with you the rest of your life. Mark Edwards and Vicky Thornton remain connected for years after the pie eating contest. They attend the same high school reunions where they reminisce about their own teen emotions and awkwardness. All the embarrassment, peer pressure and mysteries of youth come back to haunt Mark when he sees Vicky Thornton at the first high school reunion.

Mark's youthful exuberance and well-intended ambitions are no match for the hand of fate. He realizes at a young age that friendships take time to nurture and grow. He also realizes that those very same relationships only take seconds to destroy.
