2. Registering New Voters

One of the most crucial tasks as a volunteer is to help register new voters. By reaching out to your community or organizing registration drives, you can ensure that individuals who are eligible to vote are empowered to do so. Whether it's setting up booths at local events, going door-to-door, or utilizing online platforms, the goal is to make voter registration accessible to everyone. Remember, every new voter counts!

3. Phone Banking

Phone banking is a highly effective strategy to mobilize potential voters. Volunteers utilize their phones to contact registered voters and provide them with information about Democratic candidates, upcoming elections, and encourage them to head to the polls. With the right script and a positive attitude, you can make a significant impact on voter turnout from the comfort of your own home.

4. Canvassing

No campaign is complete without the power of face-to-face conversations. Canvassing involves going door-to-door, speaking directly with voters, and discussing the importance of voting for Democratic candidates. You can distribute campaign materials, answer questions, and inspire people to make an informed decision at the ballot box. It's a hands-on approach that allows you to engage with the community directly.

5. Organizing Events and Fundraisers

Aside from voter outreach, volunteers play a key role in organizing events and fundraisers to support Democratic candidates. From hosting town hall meetings to arranging campaign rallies, these events provide a platform for candidates to connect with their constituents and rally support. Fundraisers help generate funds necessary for campaign activities, such as advertisements and volunteers' resources. By helping to organize these events, you become a vital part of the campaign machinery.

6. Utilizing Social Media

In today's digital age, social media platforms offer incredible opportunities to spread the message of Democratic candidates. As a volunteer, you can use your online presence to share campaign updates, engage with potential voters, and amplify the voices of Democratic leaders. Whether it's creating captivating content or organizing virtual town halls, social media plays a crucial role in reaching a wider audience and mobilizing support.

7. Working at Polling Stations

On Election Day, volunteers are needed at polling stations to ensure a smooth voting process. Tasks include assisting voters, providing necessary information, and helping to maintain order. By offering your time and expertise in this critical phase, you contribute to the integrity of the democratic process and ensure that everyone has a chance to cast their vote.

Volunteering for the Democratic party and helping to get out the vote is a rewarding and impactful experience. By actively participating in campaign efforts, you can contribute to shaping the future of our society. No matter which role you choose, every volunteer action counts, and together, we can make a difference. So, join the movement, get involved, and let's work towards a better and more inclusive political landscape!

This book is for people who have never volunteered with a campaign before who are now saying to themselves that they are not going to sit out 2018 and they are not going to sit out 2020. This book is for people who are asking themselves, “What can I do to help elect Democrats?” Research shows that among the most effective ways to increase a voter’s chance of going to the polls is a one-to-one conversation between the voter and a volunteer. The Democratic Party and its allies have become very effective at voter mobilization. It involves the efforts of millions of volunteers across the country having simple, kind conversations. You do not need to be a policy expert. You do not need to argue politics with anyone. You just need to give a little nudge to those people who are likely to support Democrats but who do not otherwise vote in every election. If Democrats win back the Congress in 2018 and win back the White House in 2020, it will be because of the efforts of people like you. 80% of the royalties from the sale of this book will be donated to help get out the vote.
