How does one 'expose' the top rated restaurants in the world?

*Apparent racism by some places as they do not answer 'foreign' phone calls.

If one can get in, check what is on the menus.

*Reindeer penis

*Deer brain

*Bugs

*Duck heart (served with claw, feather and beak)

*Seaweed and potato chips

*Overcooked vegetables and tap water

Next, one can look at the prices.

*$100 plus for basic (non alcoholic) drinks.

*$500 per person for dishes with tiny portions.

*A total bill that can run into the thousands or tens of thousands (for a wedding after party).

And all of this at (shared tables, in some instances, with uncomfortable seats).

Time for dessert – a spoonful of ice cream (perhaps crystallized).

If it is your birthday, the waiter may leave you an entire pint to share with all (added to the bill, of course).

As well, one can watch as the chef prepares a meal – and if he sneezes and blows his nose, one can watch him continue to prepare meals (without washing his hands).

One may also get to experience under-cooked food that still has blood in it.

As well, one may get to consume leftovers, slightly warmed in a microwave.

One will also find out how some of the world's 'best' restaurants obtain 5-star reviews (by getting some customers so drunk that they think they are having a good time).

After suffering through a 'top rated' restaurant, what do some folks do?

*Spend the night in the bathroom (near a toilet).

*Go to McDonald's for burgers and fries.

*Wished that they had just ordered a pizza.

*Wonder how/why they paid so much for so little (and so bad).

*Consider calling poison control and getting a good attorney.
